

WHEN A WOMAN TELLS

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

Back in my room I settled on the window seat and waited.

Pretty soon the lights of Philip Ames' roadster appeared at the hedge. A slight figure, swathed in a heavily fringed cloak, joined the man at the wheel. And then the smart car whirled down the hill.

They had gone—Lila Ames and her brother-in-law.

And I felt somewhat to blame. Perhaps if I had not bungled—

It was nearly 8 o'clock when I remembered that I had just come in and was hungry.

There was no one in the dining room.

So I sought the kitchen and got together a lunch for myself.

Idling away the evening, I went to the library and sat in the unlighted room, watching the play of automobile lights on the road outside.

At length I heard someone walking slowly, pacing a few steps back and forth, and muttering.

"Darned insipid fool—darned insipid fool!"

It was John Ames' voice.

He was talking to himself about himself. I wondered if he was ill—or if perhaps he was just coming to his senses in regard to his wife.

"Were you speaking, Mr. Ames?" I spoke outright.

"Oh!" he seemed startled. "You, Miss Sorenson?"

"I think we must have startled each other—I had just come in and did not know the room was occupied."

"Why—a—have you had dinner?" he questioned.

"Yes, haven't you?" I asked.

He hadn't—and he remarked on the absence of the servants and the general air of desertion about the place.

I hastened to explain that there had been a very early dinner and the servants had probably taken advantage of that to go out for the evening.

Again I sought the refrigerator in the kitchen and got together the most appetizing foods I could find.

Soon I had something of a dinner ready in the dining room.

"This does seem like home," John Ames said as I poured the hot coffee and he sampled some creamed chicken on toast.

There was something pleasantly informal about our little supper and I wondered that Lila hadn't found the sincere charm of this husband of hers during some such hour.

She really did not know him—they were strangers, John Ames and his wife. They had never known the meaning of real marriage. They were, as Grace said, just in the fringes of matrimony—because Lila preferred playing with other men.

She didn't even try to keep her own hearth warm and inviting.

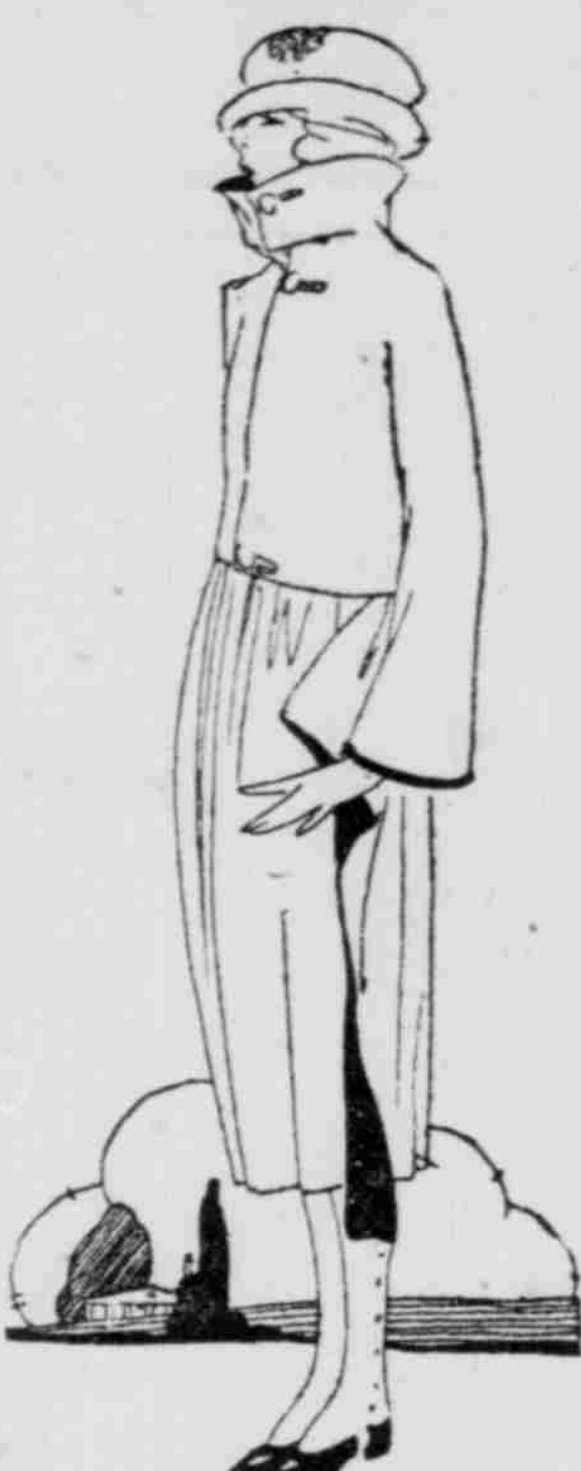

With the greatest thing in the world within their reach, they had nothing—because Lila couldn't understand.

Blue Duvetyne Trims This Coat of Burro Crepe.

A heavy silk crepe in the new shade of burro is chosen for the development of this attractive coat. The upper part is cut with a lily cup collar which flares away from the face so that the lining of blue duvetyne is revealed.

The long bell sleeves are piped with the same soft material. The buttons are covered with the crepe and, combined with their silk bound buttonholes, add a touch of decoration to the plain fronts.

The side panels are faced with blue duvetyne. The felt hat matches the color of the wrap and is trimmed with a cockade of blue ribbon.

Some of the smaller birds are playing see-saw with a vase to balance the china board in the center. Others decorate a rail fence or larded gate with a flower vase at either end.

Six Ways to Make Simple Cakes and Cookies.

Simple cakes and cookies are so handy to have in the house, especially where there are children. Fruit and nuts with tasty frostings give a fancy touch and a richer flavor when desired.

Children usually like macaroons. With the aid of almond paste they may be quickly and inexpensively made at home. The paste may be bought nowadays in pound cans for household use.

With small fancy cutters a sheet of sponge cake may be cut up into small cakes, variously frosted, which make quite an attractive offering to eat with ice cream or jellies.

Tidbits.

Cream together one and a half cups of sugar and one cup of butter. Add three well-beaten eggs, a cup of chopped and seeded raisins, a tablespoonful of chopped citron, a teaspoonful each of powdered cloves, cinnamon, allspice and vanilla flavoring. Sift in enough flour to make the mixture firm enough to roll, cut in odd shapes and bake. Frost the tidbits with fancy colored frosting, and dust with powdered nuts.

Macaroons.

Mix half a pound of almond paste with nine ounces of powdered sugar. Add the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, a teaspoonful of vanilla or almond flavoring, and a teaspoonful of sifted flour. Mix thoroughly, then drop by dessertspoonfuls on to a clean, ungreased baking pan and bake a delicate brown.

Nut Kisses.

Beat the whites of six eggs very stiff and add to them one pound of sifted powdered sugar, two tablespoons of flour, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla flavoring, and one pound of finely chopped or ground walnut meats. Mix well, and drop by tea-teaspoonfuls each of cinnamon and cloves. Mix well, then drop by teaspoonfuls onto buttered baking tins. Bake from eight to ten minutes in a medium oven. This recipe makes four dozen cookies. If desired, a French water icing may be put over the cookies. This is made by taking one cupful of confectioners' sugar, stiff it, work it to a thin paste with cold water, beat smooth, and add a few drops of flavoring, then pour it over the cookies. When dry heap onto plates.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, SEPT. 1.

This should be a very happy and successful day, according to some very pleasant lunar transits. Besides, the happy rule of two of the strongest of the orbs read as benefic, a very stubborn malefic, noted for its persistent power to obstruct and postpone, is on this day in active operation for good, furthering existing projects and making for substantial future good. Altogether it is a time for making the most of the planetary advantages, exercising strict attention and industry to affairs in hand or those that have lagged.

Those whose birthday it is should apply themselves to straightening old affairs which have been stagnant or which may have encountered obstacles. On the whole, a successful and pleasant year may be expected. A child born on this day will be industrious, persistent, successful and will rise in life.
